

Not enough hours in the day?

Do you have to work to deadlines?

Most of us do. Whether you have a contract to fulfil, are trying to get your product to market for a particular time, or simply need to complete work so you can move on to something else, time is a major driver in everything you do.

Do you feel as if you're never going to be ready?

No matter what the reason for your deadline, you seem to get busier the closer it gets. That's when people start to rush — and rushing causes mistakes to be made.

Are your staff important to you?

We all work under pressure — it's a part of modern-day life. However, reducing some of that pressure has a positive effect both on your staff and on your business.

Your staff are more valuable to you doing what you employed them to do. We can't do that — but we can write about it for you.

Why use a freelance author?

We all have to play 'beat the clock' sometimes: it's part of the job.

Being realistic about what your own staff can achieve and bringing in outside help when necessary reduces the risk that you will miss vital deadlines, while keeping the level of quality your customers expect.

